On Tuesday this gate records showed that 12,000 persons bought admission, which at fifty cents each amounted to $6,000, and receipts from the various attractions in addition to the gate money were fully $8,000, which is regarded as a record.

The inclosures, with their brilliant decorations, were arranged to a considerable extent by Mr. Charles Barney, who for weeks has been devoting his time to the color scheme, and the entire place presented an unbroken appearance for this popular section of Greater New York.

One of the features of yesterday afternoon was supplied by Misses Katherine Lispenard and Etheldreda W. Seabury, who for weeks has been devoting their time to the color scheme, and the entire place presented an unbroken appearance for this popular section of Greater New York.

The girls enlisted the services of two sailors who wheeled the organ around while they took turns at manipulating the crank and collecting money. Their tambourines were filled many times with silver coins and bills. The Misses Seabury certainly worked hard to-day to gain the money and were the center of an admiring throng as long as they kept at the organ.

In front of the Grand Giggle theater was stationed the band of the New York Fire Department, which attracted a crowd that later passed into the theater. At the entrance Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt 2d stood guard, directing the crowds which otherwise would have been in confusion. In front of the theater, to the music of the band, several young women in gypsy costumes, did a preliminary dance which made the beholders anxious to see them on the theater stage. Others who did not turn were Shadow and McNeill, Robert Woolley, the Shuffle Along orchestra, the orchestra was many happy ways.

Miss Abby Putnam Morrison explained the working of the radio which she has mastered and those who cared to give contributions had a chance to "listen in" as often as they wished to renew their subscription to the fair. F. Keith Boys' Band. Miss Edlin McKay helped add to the receipts of the fair by selling flowers and Miss Catherine Vanderbilt took in a considerable sum as a hat check girl.

John N. Cole and Miss Muriel Vanderbilt, with their flower laden pushcart, did a rushing business, as did also Miss Adele Reynal and Miss Barbara Brokaw, with their vegetable cart, which from time to time had to be replenished from the stall over which the former's mother, Mrs. Eugene S. Reynal, was presiding.

Cole and Miss Muriel Vanderbilt, with their flower laden pushcart, did a rushing business, as did also Miss Adele Reynal and Miss Barbara Brokaw, with their vegetable cart, which from time to time had to be replenished from the stall over which the former's mother, Mrs. Eugene S. Reynal, was presiding.

Miss Abby Putnam Morrison explained the working of the radio which she has mastered and those who cared to give contributions had a chance to "listen in" as often as they wished to renew their subscription to the fair. Miss Florence Watson was enthusiastically over the radio music which was transferred to the dancing pavilion, to which she danced with her partner, Miss Christine Sloan, was kept busy all the afternoon checking walking sticks and parcels, a great convenience to the donors who were guided by the ushering of the crowds to enter and listen to the music of the B. F. Keith Boys' Band. Miss Edlin McKay helped add to the receipts of the fair by selling flowers and Miss Catherine Vanderbilt took in a considerable sum as a hat check girl.
